I 次の英文を読み、下の設問に答えなさい。

On arriving at my local railway station the other night, after a hard day's work, I discovered—to my horror—that someone had stolen my bicycle. The green rusting umbrella I always *jammed behind the saddle had been thrown to the ground, and my big yellow bike, with its black basket and white plastic bell, was missing.

I walked around for some hours looking for it, but without success. I was very angry. Since then, though, I *philosophized a little. I never locked my bike because I live in Japan, where no one steals. Well, hardly anyone!

In the two years I had been using my bicycle, I had never locked it. So, in a positive way, it took me nearly two years to get it stolen. In some of the larger cities in, say, Italy or America, it would have taken 20 minutes, if that. “Even less than that,” says a friend.

I am not bitter about the *theft, and I am no longer angry. I just want my bicycle back, that's all. I want the thief to know that I need a bicycle to help me keep fit. I enjoy cycling very much. Not only that, not having a bicycle will add half an hour to my travel time to work each day because I must walk to the local railway station instead of ride there.

注 : jam 押し込む      philosophize 深く考える      theft 窃盗
